To learn more about space heaters – and to get recommendations for the best models for every home – we turned on behalf of Lou Manfredin, host of HouseSmarts, and Randy Light and Chad Hyland, home depot portable heating vendors. A space heater is a device used to heat a closed place. There are a wide range of portable space heaters to choose from, including underfloor heaters, personal space heaters, bottom heaters and wall heaters, Hyland told TODAY. On the ground, all space heaters heat the space in which they are placed. However, each type helps to heat the space differently, Hyland said. He broke up four different guys and how they worked. Ceramic space heaters: A kind of convection heater, ceramic space heaters heat the air when it blows a hot ceramic plate or coil inside the appliance. The body of the heater remains cool to the touch, which makes it popular in the homes of children and pets, hyland. Forced-air heaters: Also called a fan forcing, these convection heaters heat the air and rotate it around the room with a fan. The fan allows heat to be distributed quickly. Forced air heaters are popular in offices or small workspaces, hyland.radiant heaters stated: Radiant heaters are directional and warm up those near it or its objects. These are ideal for a living room, bedroom or nest, and tend to retain heat for longer, even if the power is turned off, said Hyland.Infrared Hyland.Infrared The type of radiant heater, infrared space heaters usually heat a person or a small area more efficiently than a larger space. You might see these in the bedroom or even under your desk if you're always cold in the office, said Hyland.Hyland shared that a space heater can save money and energy because it only heats the room or the space you use... Now that you know all about what space heaters are and what they do, how do you choose a safe but efficient space heater? Manfredini, Light and Hyland outline a few of the most important things to look for when picking up a space heater. Think about what kind of room you're trying to heat up. Light and Hyland explained that space heaters come in different sizes for different spaces , such as large room heaters, table heaters and outdoor heaters. Limit your options to the space you want to heat up to find a product that is specifically your needs. Think about how much energy it uses. Find a heater that uses 750-1000 watts. All heaters claim to be the most efficient, but most use the same amount of energy, Manfredini warned. Match the style of your heater. Do you want the heater to fit well into the interior of the room, or do you buy it as a purely functional device? According to Light, style has become a more important decision-making factor in recent years and many sauna heater brands have updated their appearance. Choose what additional features you need to have. Certain units have remote controls, thermostats and vibration ability, Hyland said. Keep fire safety in mind. If used incorrectly, heaters may pose a fire safety risk. The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission advises keeping heaters at least 3 feet away from flammable objects such as curtains or bedding. Also, do not connect portable heaters to an extension cord or power cord to reduce the risk of fire. Also make sure the units have either UL or ETL security clearance, Manfredini said. Here are some of the best indoor and outdoor heaters, according to experts. Pleat Ceramic heater with adjustable thermostat Self-regulating thermostat controls, three settings (high heat, low heat and fan) and safety features such as automatic overheating protection, Light and Hyland suggested this 9-inch high heater for small rooms or the desktop area. Pleat Low profile silent room heater Electric base heaters are great extra units that can be placed under windows with the highest heat loss, Manfredini said.Mr. Heater Buddy Portable propane heater Although most affordable heaters are made for use outdoors, this is one of the only gas heaters that is safe to use indoors, Hyland and Light said. It doesn't require electricity because it runs on a one-kilo propane tank, so it's ideal for someone with an indoor space to heat, where there's no electricity. It can also work heating during autumn and winter outdoor activities. Pleat Bladeless Electricity Space heater with remote control I have (this heater) in my master bedroom. I think it's the best-looking heater we carry, Hyland said. This heater is not only stylish, but it also vibrates to distribute heat evenly throughout the room. Crane fireplace heater The crane fireplace heater provides electric space heat, but with a realistic look of a small fireplace. [It is] the best of both worlds and can take the cold out of the living room, bedroom or family room, Manfredini said. Editor's note: This model is currently out of stock, although a similar version of Hampton Bay is currently available for $59. PELONIS Electric 1500W Oil Filled Radiator Heater Oil-filled space heaters provide residual heat and can actually cost less. They use the same power as most other heaters, but once the oil warms up and the temperature is reached, the device shuts down, but the heater oil in the device still provides heat, Manfredini said. Hunter Home Comfort's 18-inch ceramic tower heaterT tower heater may not look as beautiful as some others, but it easily heats medium to large rooms at a fraction of the cost. Light and Hyland said. The sauna heater at Lasko Cyclonic Digital Ceramic HeaterT heats large rooms quickly with cyclone heat. The heater first draws cooler air through the bottom of the appliance and distributes heat further into the room from above. Its functionality is also improved by touch sensor controls and an easy-to-clean filter.1. Honeywell UberHeat Ceramic heater With modern mid-century design, this Honeywell ceramic underfloor heater offers style, functionality and energy efficiency. Although it produces plenty of heat, its exterior remains cool to the touch.2. GiveBest Portable Electric Space HeaterAmazon reviewers will love this best-selling portable heater thanks to its lightweight design and superfast fan capable of heating a 200 sqm room in minutes. It is also built with poured protection, which turns off the device if it is accidentally knocked down.3. NewAir Whole Room Heater Although this model looks more like a speaker than a space heater, it delivers quiet warmth and comfort, registering for just under 45 decibels. It also includes an easy-to-read LCD display, a remote control that allows you to set your home temperature to ideal heat and built-in safety features such as overheating protection.
